ELECTION MEETING.

The first meeting on a public platform of the three candidates for the Edmonton district in the legislative assembly, took place on Thursday night in Robertson Hall. Isaac Cowie was appointed to the chair, and the platform was occupied by the three aspirants for political honors, Messrs. M. McCauley, M. L. A. C. Rutherford and H. H. Robertson.

It being Mr. Rutherford's meeting he was the first to speak, and, on being introduced by the chairman, explained that though living on the south side he was neither a north or a south side man. He thought that the two towns were sufficiently close to make their interests identical; that they were practically one town with one common interest. During the past two years the progress of the district has been most marked and with the progress of the surrounding country, the towns had improved and the necessity of better representation in the local government had become more apparent. The jurisdiction of the Territories had been increased; about a year ago the Territories were given responsible government and their jurisdiction now embraced nearly every subject that the older provinces had power over. The only power not given them, and which was enjoyed by older provinces, was the power of borrowing money. As to the forming of the government no better selection could have been made than that of Messrs. Haultain and Ross for the positions they occupied. The policy of the government as to schools and school teachers was worthy of our hearty endorsement. The sources from which the government draws its revenue are limited and the revenue is not nearly large enough to develop the country. This year the revenue from unexpected sources, that is, licenses in the Yukon, was from $130,000 to $140,000, a much larger amount than the government could count on for the next few years. The speaker read statistics showing the revenue and expenditure of the Territorial government, and showing that $17,385 had been expended on public works. The salaries of the two principal officials of the government were $1,500 and 1,000. Legislation, including the cost of consolidating the ordinances, had cost $7,800; administration of law $9,230; hospitals and charities, $7,750. Additional sums were voted at the last session just closed, for some of these purposes.

Regarding statute labor districts the policy pursued by the government a good one and the best one they could adopt under the circumstances. It is in the interest of trade centres that good roads should be built. It is not only in the interests of the town, but in the interests of the various settlements. The government has appointed overseers for statute labor districts and he would advocate that sums of money be placed in the hands of those overseers for the use of the various statute labor districts. Proceeding, the speaker criticised the government for not opening up a better road from Edmonton to Stony Plain and stated that, if elected, one of the improvements which he would agitate for would be the improvement of the hills between the north and south towns. The settlers wanted a road from Edmonton to Beaver lake long ago. He had lately visited Beaver lake and had found great dissatisfaction and in many cases the people were going to Wetaskiwin to do their trading rather than come to Edmonton over the existing trails. It is in the interest of both towns that the people of Beaver lake should come here to do their trading rather than go to Wetaskiwin. Now that Wetaskiwin has been made a separate district special efforts would no doubt be made to attract trade and settlers there. It should be the duty of the representative to get these roads opened up. Other parts of the district, Conjuging Creek for one, did not consider themselves fairly treated in the way of road appropriations.

Increased representation and the electing of men who could intelligently assist in the framing of the ordinances, would be a desirable innovation. In one instance, the consolidation of the ordinances, we were to have them ready by the end of last session, but the judges who had charge of the work of consolidation found there were so many errors in the legislation passed that the work would have to be delayed some time yet.

There are several broad questions to be considered at the next session of the assembly. One of them will be the advisability of having the Territories formed into one province. The speaker did not consider that the day had yet come for this step.

As to representation, we have not the right number of members; increased representation is necessary. Although Northern Alberta has one additional member it is not yet sufficient for our population.

The speaker then dealt with the redistribution bill, claiming that it was a jerry-mander, not a redistribution made on natural lines. As to forming of the Territories into different provinces, he thought it would be absurd to have more than one province. With two or three provinces the expense of government would be much greater. He would strongly oppose the giving away of any parts of the Northwest Territories to other provinces. The Dominion government had taken over the Yukon and cut off a large revenue from the Territories. He thought the Territorial government were lax in not asking for compensation when this Territory was taken away. It would have been an excellent time to have asked for it. If other discoveries are made in the north in petroleum, gold, silver or any other ore, history will repeat itself and the Dominion government will endeavor to take the territory over and appoint administrators there.

Mr. McCauley had represented the district for several years and his record is before the people and open for criticism, as is the record and public life of every public man. He thought Mr. McCauley was not heard often enough when matters of interest to his constituency came up. He had been able to find only two speeches made by him; one was on the inspection of boilers and the other on the redistribution bill, in which Mr. McCauley was interested.

Regarding the lands exempt from taxation he said it was thought that in 1892 the lands in the hands of the railway company would be liable to taxation, but there seems to be some doubt this. If appears as if they had 20 years from the time of taking up the crown grant. This state of affairs had the effect of retarding settlement, it also made it difficult to maintain schools and promote other financial matters. Million of acres were tied up in this way and he was anxious to have them taxed.

After soliciting the support of the audience and assuring them that he would serve them faithfully if returned, he resumed his chair.

Mr. McCauley, on being called upon, said he had listened with considerable pleasure and, he could say, profit to the long address that had been given them. He thought it unfortunate that Mr. Rutherford and he should be running for the same constituency, for Mr. Rutherford's policies were his policies and he could agree with him in almost everything he said.

As to the number of times he had spoken in the assembly, Mr. Rutherford was decidedly in error as there had never been a matter come up in any way concerning his constituency that he had not spoken on. Perhaps not in any lengthy speech, but he had stated his opinions and stuck to them and he could say that in almost every case he had gained his point, and another thing he could say, and he defied any man to prove the contrary, that he was always in his place when there was business to be done, either in committee or in the house. When there was anything to be said he said it, and he flattered himself that his suggestions were as well received as Mr. Rutherford's would be, for he had the respect and confidence of the ministers and members of the house. Through his instrumentality the number of pupils necessary to form a high school had been reduced from 40 to 30. In the past teachers attending normal school had been handicapped by the distance they resided from the place of examination, that is, those living far away had had a heavy railway fare to pay while those nearer got off more easily. He (Mr. McCauley) had said this was "unfair" but the premier said it was "unfortunate" and could not be remedied, but he had stuck to it, and at last got a fee of $15 put on every candidate, which fee went into a transportation fund and put all candidates on an equal footing. He merely stated this to show that though he was a supporter of Mr. Haultain, yet he did not hesitate to stick up for anything he considered as his right or the right of his constituents.

As to expenditures: In Stony Plain Centre $883 had been expended in making roads. This amount was let in six different contracts. On the base line, the line running straight west of Edmonton, the continuation of the main street of the town, $2,395 had been expended. The items were for a bridge, $770, and for corduroying a swamp west of Edmonton and generally opening out the trail. It had been claimed that the opening of this road would be impossible on account of the expense, but nevertheless the road is now opened and in going out the other day he had driven through with his horse and buggy. It had been his plan to spend money where the requirements of settlement demanded and it was on this account that the amount had been expended on the Stony Plain road. That settlement had last year marketed 200,000 bushels of grain and it was entitled to good roads. About $600 was spent on the C. & E. trail; $300 was spent at Leduc; $250 on the Sandy lake trail; $150 in making a trail running into that trail and $1,260 was spent on the trail east from here to Beaver lake. There will soon be a good road of only 36 miles from here to Beaver lake. Then again $540 was spent in the Edmonton district this year on roads and bridges (outside of the Slave lake trail), and he thought the people would agree with him that it was spent irrespective of locality and with the sole purpose of putting it where it would do the greatest good to the greatest number, and he could say that in no other year was so large an amount spent for public works in this district.

In the way of statute labor this district was rapidly coming to the front. Last season something like 50,000 worth of work was done by statute labor. The policy of the department is that they will make the main trails and the statute labor districts will make the trails leading into those main trails. In former years engineers were paid to do this work, now local overseers were appointed by the people and these overseers were responsible to the department. Thus the money granted goes directly into the district. The work on Conjuging Creek, the road to Sandy lake and the other work done in the south was in charge of the overseers instead of paying engineers. This change of system was made on the suggestion of the speaker, and it is now pretty well adopted all over the district.

Continuing the speaker said he thought he had been successful in showing that he had not been silent in the house or idle outside of it, and his speaking had been as effective as his friend Mr. Rutherford's would have been. Though a supporter of the government he had never been afraid to stand up for the rights of his district even when there had been a difference of opinion about the matter in the house. In his two years experience in the assembly he had learnt the routine work and when he wanted to know anything he knew where to go and find it; that was an advantage which a new member did not have.

ELECTION MEETING.

Regarding the meeting at Stony Plain he said: I must tell you what my friend Mr. Robertson said at Stony Plain. He told the settlers there that if he was elected he would have a good road opened for them right down to the river and a ferry put in at R. McKernan's so they could go right across to South Edmonton and do their trading." (laughter).

He denied the charge of jerry-mandering. The redistribution had been made after careful consideration of the house and he and Mr. Tims and Mr. Maloney had not put their heads together and divided the district to suit themselves, as they had been charged with. The division was the best possible one that could be made. There was no hardships one way or another.

Mr. Rutherford in his address had accused him (Mr. McCauley) of not having looked after the town's interests in the matter of the entertainment of the Minnesota editors. He had claimed that the government paid a share of the expenses in the other towns which the press delegation had visited, but Edmonton had had to stand the entire expense. As to this he could only say Mr. Rutherford was greatly in error. He had asked on the floor of the assembly that the estimates be increased to cover the expense of the visitors here. This could not be done and he had then asked to have the amount divided among the four towns interested and this was done and the town clerk had already forwarded his bill to the department and would receive his cheque at once.

In conclusion the speaker said he thought he had been able to answer all the charges brought against him and he thought he had succeeded in showing that he had been ever alive to the interests of his district. He would, therefore, ask them for their support for he thought he had a claim upon them. In any case they knew him, and "The devil you know is better than the devil you don't know." (laughter and applause).

Mr. Robertson was the last speaker of the evening and his remarks were necessarily brief as the hour was drawing late. He defended his position as to the statement made at Stony Plain that, if elected, he would have a ferry put across the river at McKernan's so the settlers could do their trading at South Edmonton. He acknowledged making the statement and stuck to it, as he considered it the right of the settlers. He criticized Mr. McCauley for expending money on the Beaver lake road as it was outside his jurisdiction and in the Victoria district. He thought the settlers of Sandy lake were unfairly dealt with in the way of roads. He claimed that the redistribution of seats was a pre-arranged jerry-mander and asserted that he knew the sender of a telegram which urged D. Maloney M. L. A. to cut off Lac la Biche and part of Stony Plain as they would go against him.

After a very brief reply by Mr. Rutherford the meeting adjourned.

A GOOD OPINION.

L. A. Paddock, one of the immigration delegates who recently visited Alberta, writes as follows of the Edmonton district to his home paper in Minneapolis:

"It was here (Calgary) that we took the train for Edmonton which runs a little east of north for 192 miles. The first 58 miles is a fine grazing country with plenty of pure water for stock. After reaching Olds the dairies industry commences and the Canadian government has built creameries at different stations which gives the farmers an excellent market for their cream. After passing Olds mixed farming commences at Bowden. We met H. F. Powell, an old Minnesota boy, who has been located there for the past six years. Innisfail is a fine prosperous village with a contented and happy people. The next town of importance is Red Deer where the train stopped for dinner. It has a fine hotel, a flour and saw mill and a creamery. It also is a very prosperous village. The next town is Lacombe where a great many Michigan people are settling, and all think that they have made a good choice. One of the best towns on the C. & E. railway is Wetaskiwin where there is a large Scandinavian settlement to the east, and a large German settlement to the west. Wetaskiwin surely has a great future and will do a large business as it is situated in the midst of a fine farming country. Leduc is the next town of importance. Edmonton is located on the banks of the Saskatchewan river in the centre of a good farming country. It has a population of about 5,000 and the business men are all doing a thriving business.

While stopping at this place we secured teams and drove out into the country. We talked with many farmers and they all assured us that they had never had a failure of crops and that wheat averaged from 35 to 55 bushels per acre; oats from 70 to 100 bushels; barley from 50 to 70 bushels; potatoes from 400 to 800 bushels. The soil is a black loam, from two to four feet deep with clay subsoil. The land close to the town is all taken, but homesteads can be had within 20 or 30 miles of Edmonton and railroad lands can be had within six miles for $3 per acre on long time and low interest. All the farmers in the Canadian Northwest are contented and happy. With good markets at their doors, and their graineries full of grain; plenty of good fat hogs and cattle, and plenty of wood and coal for the hauling of it; no chattel mortgages or seed grain notes to bother them; taxes very low and the Canadian government doing all it can for the people, it is no wonder that the farmers in the Canadian Northwest are prosperous, contented and happy."

BEAVER LAKE EAST.

John D. McAllister lost a valuable mare lately while he was away at Wetaskiwin. The animal fell into a well on a neighbor's farm. The waves and geese are fairly numerous, but hard to get. Mr. Morrison left a while since to go north. He carries with him the best wishes of the community.

The new Presbyterian missionary, Mr. Hogg, holds fortnightly services here and at the south end of the lake. E. Dennis' threshing has been at work here for about two weeks. The yield of grain is disappointing in most cases.

Mr. Verch presented us with a sample of his onions lately. They measured 14 inches in circumference. Some of the largest he had would go about 15 or 16 inches. For a dry season this is hard to beat.

The vote of four for prohibition to ten against doesn't look very creditable for a farming community like this. The reasons given for voting against it are various. Some came from counties in Ontario where the Scott act was tied, and say it was a failure; others don't think the "liberty of the subject" should be infringed upon. A great many all over the country no doubt voted "no" because, in the immortal language of a certain political candidate who was snowed under, they "like their grog," and having (so they say) backbone enough to keep from making beasts of themselves with it, those who haven't may go where it is supposed to be pretty sultry, for all they care.

Owing to the changes made in the constituencies, Mr. Fane has retired from the contest. The vote here will probably be divided, though Mr. McCauley seems to be the favorite. Election day will tell the tale. Oct. 11.

Was a grand success, and we had a full house. The people came, they saw, and they were captivated. It was a genuine surprise to everyone to see the magnificent range of goods that were shown for the Fall and Winter trade. Every department was full to overflowing and each seemed to offer special inducement to buyers.

The stock of Dress Goods shown is very large and much superior to the ordinary, and the lady would be very hard indeed to please that could not find something to suit, and something new, as among the better lines no two dress pieces alike. Trimmings of all kinds to match.

The Mantle Cloths also commended themselves to our many visitors.

The large display of Ladies' Felt Hats, Tam O'Shanter, Fancy Wool Hoods, Clouds, Scarf Ties, Eiderdown Cloth and Fur Jackets, Underskirts, Wrappers, Dressing Jackets Gowns and Underwear. Fall Blouses and Shirt Waists in Flannelette, Cashmere and Silk. Muffs, Neckruffs, Corsets, Veilings, Ribbons, Gloves, Hosiery and the hundred and one other articles and nick-nacks that go to beautify the home and adorn the person; all those and much more won the admiration of the throng of visitors, and, as was remarked by many, reminded one more of Simpson's or Eaton's than Edmonton. But Edmonton is forging ahead, and we are leading.

The Men's Department is equally as interesting as the ladies', and the stock is large and new.

We secure the very best of values for our customers and they at all times get the benefit. The larger the business the cheaper the prices.

LIKE A SOLDIER THEY LAID HIM TO REST.

Under the above heading the Klondike Nugget, of Dawson, gives the following report of the burial of Const. Harry Dundas, N. W. M. P., formerly of the detachment here:

"The body of Harry Dundas was interred on Saturday afternoon, the 31st July, with military honors. The ceremony was quite affecting. A procession formed at the barracks and moved thence to the grave yard on the hill. The procession was headed by a squad of mounted police in full uniform under Sergeant-Major Tucker, all fully armed but with guns reversed. Then came a wagon drawn by two horses, containing the coffin draped with the national flag. The dead constable's horse followed caparisoned in black and white trappings. Across the pommel of the empty saddle was fastened the dead man's gun; his reversed boots were hung in the idly swinging stirrups.

"Twenty more policemen, in the customary brown uniform of the country and then followed Captains Starnes and Harper, Judge McVicar, other officials and a company of citizens. At the grave a volley was fired over the uncovered coffin, then the bugle sounded the first half of the "Royal salute." Another volley and more bagging and then the final volley brought out the pathetic call of "taps," or "lights out" as it is interpreted by the uninitiated. The Rev. Grant and Rev. Dickey led the burial services.

ANGUS RIDGE

Misses Angus, Martin, and Messrs. Chapple and McVicar attended the Teacher's convention in Edmonton. The managers in connection with the Presbyterian church held a meeting on Wednesday evening, Rev. Rundy was present. There was a fair attendance from the district at the Wetaskiwin fair on Tuesday last. Harvesting prevented many from attending. The warm weather on Thursday and Friday was all that could be desired to get the grain in a fit state for stacking. Mrs. MacRae, Gibbins, and Kincaid were the lady judges at the Wetaskiwin fair.

TERRITORIAL ELECTIONS.

Regina, Oct. 14th: Writs were signed to-day appointing Friday the 28th inst. as nomination, and Friday the 4th, November as election day for the Legislative assembly. The following returning officers were appointed for the districts named: Victoria, John F. Forbes; Edmonton, W. Scott Robertson; St. Albert, H. W. McKenny.

THROUGH THE YELLOWHEAD PASS.

J. A. McEvoy of the geological department, Ottawa; Wm. Spreadborough, botanist; with two packers F. Jackson and Sam Derr, returned from a four months trip through the mountains by the Yellowhead pass, on Friday. Mr. McEvoy was sent by the geological department and is not at liberty to speak of the purpose of the trip, but stated that it was successful. Mr. Spreadborough went in search of rare mountain plants and other peculiarities of interest to the naturalist.

The route taken by the party was through the Yellowhead pass, down the Fraser to the Tete Jaune Cache and across the Canoe river. From Edmonton to the Cache is 20 days travelling, with good roads. The party spent some time in the mountains and on returning left the Jasper lake and crossed the mountains to the Brazeau river and thence to the MacLeod down which they came to the "leavings".

At the Cache they met a party of twelve mica miners who had come in from Kamloops, under the leadership of John F. Smith, of Louis Creek, who was half owner of one of the mines. They were taking out a pack train load of the mica to Kamloops. Two other prospectors named Spittal and Dow were met near the Grand Forks of the Fraser, on their way to Barkerville. They, too, were interested in mica mines and had gone through from Edmonton to try to locate a sleigh road through the pass to the Athabasca in order to bring their mica down by sleigh and boat to a shipping point at Edmonton. On the Brazeau two men, Elliott and Lamberton were met. They had gone in by Edmonton and intended wintering on the head waters of the Brazeau.
